"Since I didn't like traditions, Livingston's liberal and unconventional atmosphere attracted me."

"I thought Livingston was going to be a predominantly third world school."

REMEMBER:

Getting the "munchies" at 1:00 A.M....going to Greasy Tony's...going to the truck even though it ripped off your bucks...ordering pizza, and waiting half the night for it...Remember ducking the frisbees in Quad I...the dances at OLCH...getting stuck in the elevator, or having to walk to the eighth floor after the elevator broke...Remember the beer parties in Quads I and II and the enjoyment that Ripple, Mad Dog, Boone's Farm and Sangria gave you...Remember the "gourmet" food in the cafeteria...trying to use someone else's meal ticket...Quad I, Livingston's answer to Woodstock...Remember bragging about living in Quad III and having someone tell you it's the ghetto...or living in Quad II and not knowing it was the suburban area of the campus...Remember walking in on your roommate when he or she was "OCCUPIED"...or putting your roommate out for the night...Remember taking advantage of the "Black-Outs"...liberating dishes from the cafeteria...going to Rutgers Health Center after Livingston's closed for the day...Remember the streakers...standing in line at the Registrar's Office...waiting until the last minute to add/drop...forging your advisor's signature...feeling like you were going to die while waiting in the Health Center...Remember rushing to the post office before 4:30 P.M....forgetting your box combination ...knowing you're supposed to get a package, but not being able to get it because the window has closed...Remember stuffing the fire bells with towels, T.V. guides, match books and...having to evacuate at 3:00 A.M....OOPS! false alarm again...and again...and again...Remember the bomb scares meant you didn't have class...getting lost in the tunnels...losing your last quarters in the washer and dryer...trying to dry your clothes in a dryer that blows cold air...Remember running out of hot water in the middle of a shower...Remember the "townies"...waiting for the "C" bus that never came while you froze in sub-zero weather...running for the bus only to have the door slammed in your face...missing the last bus and wondering how you were going to get back...Remember when Livingston was only mud and had no trees and grass...jumping over one mud puddle only to land in another...Remember taking over the Dean's office...walking out on a certain dean in the middle of a sentence...missing his last words but not EVEN caring...Remember "AIN'T NOBODY SCARED"...Remember the Pan African Festival...the Puerto Rican Festival...the Spirit of '73...the Sabu's in the Main Lounge...the concerts...listening to L.G., the Master on Tuesday nights...Remember running out of paper at a crucial moment...running out of toilet paper—that's crucial...writing a paper...the night before it's due...Remember the football games at Antilles Field...trying to relax in the lounge while someone banged on the house door...watching the Q's and the Grooves perform in the Quads...Remember fighting to the end to get off the meal plan, but rarely succeeding...pleading insanity to get a single room...being introduced to someone and the first thing they ask is "What's your sign?"...Remember the teach-ins in Tillet Hall...getting so many parking tickets that they almost total the cost of your car...going to the parking lot only to discover that your car has been stolen or towed away...Remember...Livingston?

"This is a revolution. It started long before I came into it, and I may die before it's over, but we'll bust this thing and cut out this cancer. America will be as strong and beautiful as it should be, for black folks and white folks. We'll all be free then, free from a system that makes a man less than a man, that teaches hate and fear and ignorance.

"You didn't die a slave for nothing, Momma. You brought us up. You and all those Negro mothers who gave their kids the strength to go on, to take that thimble to the well while the whites were taking buckets. Those of us who weren't destroyed got stronger, got calluses on our souls. And now we're ready to change a system, a system where a white man can destroy a black man with a single word. Nigger.

"When we're through, Momma, there won't be any niggers any more."

WHERE THE RAINBOW ENDS

Where the rainbow ends
There's going to be a place, brother,
Where the world can sing all sorts of songs,
And we're going to sing together, brother,
You and I, though you're white and I'm not.
It's going to be a sad song, brother,
Because we don't know the tune,
And it's a difficult tune to learn.
But we can learn, brother, you and I.
There's no such tune as a black tune.
There's no such tune as a white tune.
There's only music, brother,
And it's music we're going to sing
Where the rainbow ends.

To the Graduating Class of 1974, Livingston College

This has been a year in which we have seen the legitimacy and credibility of some of the most central institutions of our society shaken. At all scales of concern—national, regional, state and local—there has been a breakdown of public faith and confidence attended by the explosive growth of disillusionment and cynicism.

What has occurred in society as a whole, has always manifested itself in Livingston College as well. We have gone through our own crisis of confidence. The reason for this is surely related to the fact that our college, more than most, represents a cross-section of society in its students and faculty: affluent, middle class, and poor; white, black and Puerto Rican, we represent a heterogeneous mix of all of the elements of our social order. Since we have chosen not to be homogenized into only one class or ethnic group, we have brought with us into our collegiate halls many of the issues which are left at the threshold of more homogeneous colleges. We are a part of society, not apart from society.

In Livingston during this year, pressures arising from the inadequate support of certain vital areas threatened to divide us into competing interest groups. Despite the relentless pressures of resource scarcity which we feel so acutely, we were able to respond by drawing together to fight for common goals, rather than split apart to compete with each other. Our success in this regard has been greater than society's. We may be proud of it.

As the Spring semester progresses, there seems to be growing a renewed interest in the organization of student participation in community governance. I hope and trust that students and faculty alike will continue to work out the means to enable Livingston College to respond in unity to the challenges which await us in the future.

If it is true that our college is of society rather than a thing apart, then we hope that you, the graduating class, will remain committed to our efforts to grow as a multi-racial, multi-ethnic institution dedicated to providing a quality education to the members of all of the communities to which you now return. We hope that as you work towards the betterment of those communities, that—by word and deed—you will be advocated of the College. And we hope that you will remain active and interested participants in our efforts as alumni. Goodbye and good luck.

Sincerely,

George W. Cary
Acting Dean
